

WFU Summer

Fez, Morocco: Arabic/French Language Study

Courses: 6 hours of transfer credit for the Arabic/
French courses plus 3 hours WFU credit

Dates: Summer Session I, May 23 to July 9

Accommodations: Homestays

Cost: Program Fee (estimated) - $4,200 (includes 6hrs transfer credit)

Tuition (3 hrs) - $2,700

Airfare (estimated) - $1,800

Personal Expenses (estimated) - $600

Estimated Total Program Cost - $9,300

Morocco is a country of many contrasts, where centuries-old traditions and modern technology are at the heart of dynamic and hospitable culture. From the Roman ruins of Volubilis and the medieval cities of Marrakesh and Fez with their famous souks (markets), to the high-rise financial district of Casablanca, from the mountains and desert of the interior to the long stretches of coastal beaches, from the couscous and tajines to every kind of European cuisine, Morocco offers its visitors the unique example of a country whose deeply rooted cultural values have accommodated ideas and practices of its European neighbors.

A Wake Forest faculty member serves as resident professor in Fez to oversee program academics. Courses taught by resident professor and professors at ALIF to include 6 hours of either Arabic or French and one 3-hour course from the resident professor's discipline for a total of 9 hours of credit. Academic study is enriched by a cultural immersion experience through homestays with Moroccan families and various excursions.

Excursions may include weekend trips to the following places: Meknes, Volubilis, Moulay Idriss, Middle Atlas (Azrou, Um al-Rabi'a), a Desert excursion (overnight), Rabat (overnight), and a planned 4-day excursion to Marrakesh, Essaouira, and Casablanca. Cities are subject to change.

To learn more, contact:

Darlene May, Lecturer of Religion and Arabic

Phone: 336-758-5908

E-mail: maydr@wfu.edu

To apply:

Go to studyabroad.wfu.edu

and select Find a Program

Application Deadline: March 27, 2014

Center for International Studies

116 Reynolda Hall
studyabroad.wfu.edu

336-758-5938